PARTY LEADERS WANT PRESIDENT TO DELAY NAVAL TREATY VOTE

Circulate Petition Asking
Hoover To Withdraw Threat

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Another determined effort to persuade President Hoover to allow the London naval treaty to go over until the regular session next December is being made by an influential group of Republicans in the senate.

The president has stated that unless the senate ratifies the pact before adjournment of the present session he will immediately call a special session to act on it. He has remained deaf to the appeals of Republican leaders against this plan.

Today there was being circulated about the senate a "round robin" asking Mr. Hoover to reconsider. It already has more than twenty names.

Senate leaders have no intention of attempting to ratify the treaty at the present session. They plan to adjourn as soon as the tariff and rivers and harbors bills can be disposed of, and then wait the president's pleasure about a special session. As soon as the special session convenes an effort will be made to recess it until November.

Meanwhile, Senator Johnson (R) of Calif., continues to hammer away at the terms of the pact. In an exhaustive analysis of the cruiser provisions, Johnson asserted that under them:

"Great Britain builds as she prefers; the United States builds as great Britain permits."

This referred to the success of the British in restricting American eight-inch cruisers to sixteen during the life of the treaty, and compelling other tonnage to be built in six-inch cruisers, which eight out of ten admirals condemned in the senate hearings.

SEVEN HURT IN CRASH AT RACE

AKRON, O., June 9.—Six automobile race drivers and one pedestrian were recovering from injuries here today as the result of accidents at the Northampton race track near here yesterday.

Jacob Feyso, 22, of Cleveland, the pedestrian, and Gilbert Szabo, 26, also of Cleveland, driver of the race car which struck Feyso, were taken to St. Thomas' Hospital with serious injuries.

Feyso was run down when he attempted to cross the track during a race. Szabo suffered a fractured rib and other serious injuries when his machine swerved from the track as he attempted to avoid striking Feyso.

Six other drivers were injured in crashes. They are Bill Saunders, Akron, Al Borrell, Columbus, B. R. Twyman, Alfred Frascan and C. Ponikver, all of Cleveland. None was seriously hurt.

FIFTEEN POISONED BY EATING POP CORN

CLEVELAND, O., June 9.—Fifteen persons were recovering here today from poisoning which is believed to have been caused by popcorn which they purchased at an amusement park. One of the victims was taken to St. Alexis Hospital.

They were taken suddenly ill when they returned to their homes here late yesterday.

Ben Podalsky, 21, who was taken to the hospital, said that he and a number of friends and relatives could account for the illness in no other way. Four members of the party who did not eat popcorn did not become ill, Podalsky said.

Physicians said the illness closely resembled ptomaine poisoning.

MOTHER TO REMOVE BODY OF DAUGHTER

NEW YORK, June 9.—Arrangements for the removal of the body of Anna Urbas, slain sweetheart of the murdered gangster Gene Moran, from the city morgue were being made today by her mother, Mrs. Mary Urbas of Cleveland.

Mrs. Urbas who is being guarded by detectives in her hotel here, tried yesterday to have the body removed but failed because the medical examiner's office was closed.

Mrs. Urbas' claiming of the body of her daughter prevents it being buried in Potter's Field.

FORMER WIFE HOPES CAROL ASCENDANCY WILL ASSIST CHILD

Claims Marriage To Prince Was Legal;
Seeks Right

NEUILLY, June 9.—Mme. Zizi Lambrino, former morganatic wife of King Carol II of Roumania, expressed a hope today, in an interview with the International News Service at her villa here, that Carol's succession to the Roumanian throne might be of benefit to their son Mircea.

"Now that the father of Mircea is king of Roumania, I hope his first thought will be towards his duty to his child," Mme. Lambrino said.

A photograph of Carol, in the uniform of a colonel of a regiment of hussars, and Paris morning newspapers carrying the latest news from Roumania stood on a table in her room.

Mircea played about the room during the interview.

Mme. Lambrino refused to accept the status of having been Carol's morganatic wife.

"I was legally married to Carol at Odessa in 1918, by Monsignor Charavsky and there is no morganatic marriage in Roumania," she declared. "There were several Roumanian officers present as witnesses and I have numerous letters from high church officials expressing indignation at the annulment."

"Our marriage was legalized by the Roumanian legation at Odessa."

"If all this weren't true, do you think I, his legal wife, would have come to Paris and started proceedings in a foreign court against my husband?"

"I knew I wouldn't win. The political situation was against me, but I felt I had the right to show the world that the Prince should be compelled to keep his word."

"He has never come to my aid nor to his child's."

"Now that he is king, I have all hope we will come into our rights—Mircea and I."

RACKETEER TRIAL FOR MURDER STARTS

CLEVELAND, June 9.—Trial of Angelo Lonardo, only surviving member of a once powerful family of corn sugar racketeers, and Dominick Susprato began in Common Pleas Court here today before Judge James B. Ruhl. The pair is accused of the murder of Salvatore (Black Jack) Todaro nearly a year ago.

The original charge of first degree murder against Susprato and Lonardo was reduced last Saturday by County Prosecutor Ray T. Miller to a charge of second-degree murder. The action was taken, according to the county prosecutor, because the state's star witness, Angelo Scira, was in Italy and refused to return to testify.

Attorneys for the two alleged slayers indicated today that they would vigorously protest Miller's decision in reducing the degree of homicide.

Lonardo is the second of his notorious family to face trial in the murder of Todaro. His mother, Mrs. Concetta Lonardo, was acquitted last fall for participation in the slaying.

HIT-SKIP DRIVER SOUGHT IN DEATH

NEWTOWN, O., June 9.—Members of what started out to be a merry hay ride party, today mourned the death of Mrs. Helen Dereisa who was injured fatally yesterday when she was struck by an automobile six miles from Mount Carmel, O., on the Ohio Pike.

The tragedy occurred when Mrs. Dereisa started from her home to join the merry-makers. She was struck by a hit-skip motorist when she walked from behind the hay-filled truck into the path of the automobile. The driver escaped.

Mrs. Dereisa's death was the eighty-sixth fatality due to automobile accidents in Hamilton County since the first of January.

TWO GIRLS MISSING

HAMILTON, O., June 9.—Belle Vold Stewart, 14, and Mary Belle Smith, 17, today were being sought by police. The two girls were reported missing by their parents since yesterday morning. No motive was given for the girls' absence.

CAROL CROWNED KING OF ROUMANIA

"To save Roumania" was the reason given by Prince Carol for deserting his paramour, Madame Lupescu, and returning to the country he left four years ago to claim the throne he deserted. Carol, shown at top left, has now been declared king but the wife he deserted, Princess Helene, has refused to be reconciled. In returning to the throne, Carol deposed his son, Michael, lower left, who now becomes crown prince and abandoned the beautiful Madame Lupescu, lower right.

TWO MORE GANG LAND KILLINGS OCCUR IN RENEWED WARFARE

CHICAGO, June 9.—The warfare that has wracked Chicago's rival gangs for the past week flared out anew today with the slaying of one racketeer and the mysterious shooting of Frank Thompson, once accused as the distributor of the machine guns which were used in the St. Valentine's Day massacre of seven Moran gangsters.

Aloysius Kearney, reputed racketeer, organization slugger and collector, was shot and killed today.

Six bullets were fired into his body from close range and he slumped to the sidewalk and died.

Thompson, who was questioned following the St. Valentine's Day massacre and admitted selling several machine guns to gangsters, was near death at a Rockford, Ill., hospital today where he was taken after he slumped over the steering wheel of his automobile with a bullet near his heart.

PICKS ODD BED

CLEVELAND, O., June 9.—A man who likes to sleep sixty-seven feet above the street level on a narrow iron beam over a railroad bridge was found by police here today.

It took the combined efforts of police and firemen to convince the man that his chosen bed for the night was not the proper place to sleep.

He said he was a structural iron worker.

The man climbed sixty-seven feet to the top of the bridge over the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks on the east side and was sleeping peacefully on a narrow girder when a patrolman spied him.

CATCH INSANE NEGRO KILLER

Capture Leaves But Convict Free

IONIA, Mich., June 9.—Henry Vaden, giant Negro killer, who was among the thirteen insane convicts who executed a sensational escape from the Ionia State Hospital for the Criminally Insane was captured by a posse at Hastings, in Barry County, early today. His capture leaves only one of the escaped madmen at large.

Vaden was reported in a woods, near Hastings, late last night, and Sheriff George Leonard and his deputies had surrounded the woods, when Vaden calmly walked into Hastings and started begging from door to door. He had collected several dollars and was about to board a train, when a hastily-organized posse captured him.

Vaden was committed to the hospital from Detroit on a murder charge. He was considered one of the most dangerous madmen who escaped.

WOMAN SAVED WHEN TRAPPED BY BLAZE

CINCINNATI, O., June 9.—A landlady was grateful today to one of her roomers whose timely arrival saved her from death yesterday when she was trapped on an upper story of her house by fire.

Warren Sullivan, 20, laborer, arrived at his rooming house just in time to carry Mrs. Mason Deeley, his landlady, to safety. He also aided other tenants in vacating the burning building.

Loss was estimated at $9,000.

DISREGARD FOR LAW IN CLINTON COUNTY EXPOSED BY REPORT

Findings of $136,003 Returned In Road Scandals

COLUMBUS, O., June 9.—"An almost absolute disregard for the laws" was found in Clinton County by state examiners, according to a report which was made public here today by State Auditor Joseph T. Tracy.

The report, which covers a special investigation into certain financial transactions of former County Auditor Harry Gaskill, of Clinton County, who is now a prisoner in Ohio Penitentiary, holds that Gaskill and other persons owed the county $136,003.

Gaskill, convicted of embezzlement of public funds, was received at the state prison here April 18, last, to serve a sentence of from two to ten years. Indictments have been returned against several others. One person connected with these alleged illegal transactions committed suicide.

The report, which was submitted by State Examiners M. L. Campbell, Jr., and H. H. Hastings, declares that, in the course of the investigation of the auditor's office, linked with the county commissioners' office, the examiners found "a most disgraceful condition existing, and one which has existed for years—worse than anything that your examiners ever found in any public office in the state."

It is extremely hard to adequately present the true condition of the affairs as existed in the auditor's office for years, as the things disclosed by this examination are almost unbelievable," the examiners stated.

Gaskill was county auditor throughout the ten-year period which was covered by this investigation.

Among other things, the report charged that Gaskill repeatedly ignored the law governing docketing, filing and payment of bills and as to his duties as secretary to the board of county commissioners.

"Hundreds of warrants were issued to non-existent persons, or to living persons, who never received the money," the report declared.

"Many bills allowed by the commissioners could not be intelligently checked because they contained little, or no, information."

Forgeries and other frauds featured activities during the ten-year period, according to the report. The work of the examiners was somewhat impeded by the fact that many valuable records were missing from the files in the county auditor's office. Bills and vouchers

WOMAN IS SLAIN

AKRON, O., June 9.—Police here today were searching for a former suitor of Mrs. June Ashby, 35, who is believed to have shot and killed the woman at a friend's home here yesterday.

Mrs. Ashby died in City Hospital one hour after the shooting from three bullet wounds. The man's identity was not revealed.

BANDIT WOUNDED

BARBERTON, O., June 9.—R. W. Perkins, 25, is in Citizens' Hospital here today suffering from a gunshot wound which police say he received during an attempted robbery.

Perkins is alleged to have attempted to enter a South Akron gasoline station when the attendant shot him.

FARMER DROWNS

NEWARK, O., June 9.—Funeral arrangements were being made today for James Wise, 28, farmer, who was drowned when he fell from a boat Sunday while fishing at Blue Goose shores, Buckeye Lake.

AUTOIST KILLED

COLUMBUS, O., June 9.—The body of Thomas Shea, 28, who met death in an auto collision here Sunday, will be buried Tuesday. Shea's machine hit a street car.

"PA" DOUGHERTY LOAFES TODAY

He Gets Nothing From Lottery Winnings But Isn't Worried About Job

NEW YORK, June 9.—All was quiet and outwardly serene today with the Doughertys of Brooklyn, who rode to riches on a $1 lottery ticket on the Epsom Downs Derby.

"Pa" Dougherty has "piped down" and is no longer claiming the money—not any part of the $149,000. Ah well, his two sons, Danny, Jr., and Eddie have "split" the winnings and, apparently it's "jake" with "pa," albeit "pa" is doing a lot of ruminating.

Eddie got $71,813.83. Danny got $71,813.83. "Pa" got nothing.

"Oh, well," said "pa," resignedly, "the check was drafted to the boys and I let it go at that."

DERBY FORTUNE DIVIDED

Twenty-Dollar-A-Week Clerk Realizes $149,000 From $1 Sweepstake Ticket

NEW YORK, June 9.—When that great thoroughbred, Blenheim, streaked home a winner in this year's English Derby, the beat of his victorious hoofs almost wrecked the peace of the modest Dougherty home in Brooklyn, N. Y., thousands of miles from Epsom Downs.

For Edward Dougherty, the family's 15-year-old son, whose labors as a Wall Street clerk net him exactly $20 a week, held the $149,000 winning ticket of the Army and Navy Veterans' Sweepstakes.

Incredibly that melted to joy at this unexpected windfall turned finally into wild dissension when Daniel Dougherty, Sr., and Eddie's brother, Daniel, Jr., each claimed that they owned part of the ticket which Eddie had bought for $1 the week before.

Eddie appeared, had sold half of his ticket to young Dan for fifty cents. They entrusted the pasteboard to their father for safe-keeping. When the news of Blenheim's victory burst its way into the Dougherty domicile, Dan, Sr., announced that he had bought the ticket from his son for $1 and that, consequently, the entire fortune belonged to him.

Both boys have been reared to respect and obey their father, but Eddie and young Dan declared that in this case their revered parent was horribly mistaken. Pop, they said, was merely custodian of the ticket, not its owner.

Dan, Sr., who is a doorman at the fashionable Copley Plaza

QUEEN MARIE DECLARES SHE IS NOT BEING EXILED

Sister Indignant Over Report; Queen Sees Passion Play

OVERMARMERGAU, June 9.—Marie, dowager queen of Roumania, denied that she was tacitly in exile from Roumania where King Carol II was reigning monarch to-day after a dramatic and spectacular coup d'etat by airplane from Paris to Bucharest.

The queen planned to attend today's performance of the passion play. She said she planned to return to Roumania next Saturday.

Queen Marie's sister, Grand Duchess Kyrill, was indignant over the report that Marie had been exiled.

"It's a damned lie!" she said. "These are harsh words to use, but I mean them. There is nothing to it. Queen Marie is returning to Bucharest next Saturday."

The dowager queen came here from Munich and she is staying as a guest of a school friend at the Villa Raven.

Queen Marie arrived at the Oberamargau Amphitheater at 8 o'clock this morning in a luxurious limousine. Met by her two sisters, she proceeded immediately to her seat, paying scant attention to the interest shown by the other spectators.

Dressed in a mauve gown trimmed with chinchilla and a close-fitting hat the queen followed the performance with great interest. She left the theater during the intermission at 11:30, declining to acknowledge numerous bows in her direction.

WIFE SLAYER GOES ON TRIAL AT WARREN

WARREN, O., June 9.—The murder trial of William Schmidt, who is alleged to have shot and killed his wife last March 3, was started in Common Pleas Court here today.

The indictment under which Schmidt is held charges murder in the first degree. The man entered a plea of temporary insanity when he was arraigned.

HOME BREW SEIZED

HAMILTON, O., June 9.—Two hundred and fifty quarts of home brew had been seized here today by police and Emmerick Honussek was facing liquor charges as a result of a raid yesterday following complaints that liquor was being sold to students at Miami University, Oxford, O.

The police also seized a quantity of corn mash and confiscated brewing implements and malt.

GOVERNOR HONORED

ATHENS, O., June 9.—Governor Myers Y. Cooper's name today is on the list of those who were honored by Ohio University with the degree of doctor of law. This honorary title was conferred upon the governor here Sunday in connection with the one hundred twenty-sixth commencement exercises of the university.

LIBERAL PARTY MAY PROTEST NEW KING; SEE HUNGARY UNION

Carol Seizes Throne And Son, Spurned By Princess Helen

BUCHAREST, June 9.—Political opposition to King Carol took definite shape today Gaskill, and E. J. Stackhouse, secretary, and that Gaskill jointly owed $6,750 because of "unlawful sale of lots."

When former Premier Vintila Bratianu, Liberal leader and arch-enemy of the new monarch, announced he would issue an official protest against the new regime in his newspaper Viitorul tomorrow.

Under the heading of "Long Live King Michael," Bratianu illegal and void, he declared.

King Carol let it be known that if this happens he will confiscate the newspaper "and take necessary measures against the editors and liberal leaders."

While Bratianu remains adamant in his opposition to Carol, certain other Liberal leaders have announced their fealty to the new king.

Many priests, headed by the Moldavian Patriarch Pimen refused to swear allegiance to King Carol today according to the newspaper Cuvantul.

Pimen resigned.

Carol promoted numerous officers to high positions placing Colonel Marinescu as chief of police in Bucharest.

BUDAPEST, June 9.—The Roumanian Liberal party today planned issuing a memorandum declaring the decisions which placed King Carol II on the Roumanian throne are illegal, according to reports from Bucharest.

BUCHAREST, June 9.—King Carol II, of Roumania, who wiped out five years of history in his dramatic seizure of the throne, failed today in his attempts to stage a reconciliation with his wife, the former Princess Helen of Greece.

In spite of Carol's efforts to rekindle the spark of romance and over the protestations of Roumanian political leaders, Princess Helen today flatly rejected all attempts at conciliation.

As a result of her adamant attitude, King Carol has been forced to withdraw his petition for annulment of their divorce, granted to Princess Helen after Carol renounced his kingly rights and fled to France with the Titian-haired beauty, Mme. Magda Lupescu.

With Helen's definite decision to remain separated from her former husband, thus renouncing her chances to become queen of Roumania, her son, Michael, became an innocent pawn on the political chess-board of the country.

Coincidentally with her refusal of reconciliation, Helen demanded Michael be returned into her custody.

MURDERS WIFE AND ENDS LIFE

COLUMBUS, O., June 9.—Jealousy was held responsible today for the acts of William A. Cox, 45, local truck driver, who killed his wife, Mrs. Violet Cox, 36, mother of three children, and then committed suicide.

After shooting his wife through the heart, Cox fired two bullets into his own heart. Cox died almost instantly. Cox's death occurred within a few minutes.

The shooting took place Sunday forenoon at the family home.

Relatives, who are taking care of the orphaned children, asserted that Cox was not justified in being jealous of his wife. They said he had threatened her several times, and, apparently, planned the murder-suicide several days before.

MISSIONARY IS HELD BY BANDITS

LONDON, June 9.—Clifford King, American missionary member of the mission society of the Divine Word, was reported to have been captured by bandits in the southern part of Honan province in southeast China today.

The messengers gave no details about the kidnapping.

AUTO RACER KILLED

DEFIANCE, O., June 9.—The death of Webster Edgeman, 29, Detroit auto racer, today had caused the calling off of the auto race which was scheduled to be held at the Mason automobile race track, fifteen miles northwest of Defiance. Edgeman was fatally hurt when his car overturned Sunday on a curve of the track while he was warming up his motor. He died in a hospital here.

"The church of all time must ever keep in faithful memory the true concept and interpretations of the apostles,—men, who from both a physical and spiritual point of view knew Jesus best. Men who walked and talked with him in the flesh. Might we listen to the apostle of the text: 'I know in whom I have believed and that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him against that day.'"

"With these ever earnest and faithful disciples; despite the meaningless vagaries of 'higher criticism' Jesus of Nazareth was never the mere 'super man,' 'exemplary character,' 'central figure' of modern day preachments but ever the 'Christ of God,' 'The-anthropos' Personality."

Rev. D. A. Harshaw of Springfield, Ill., delivered the address at the annual vesper services. The annual address to the graduating class of Payne Theological Seminary was given by one of the former graduates, the Rev. A. O. Wilson, serving as president of Shorter College at Little Rock, Ark. DERBY FORTUNE IS DIVIDED BY BROKERAGE CLERK

Apartment in Brooklyn, cried, "holoney!" and added that the boys were too young and wild to be given a hundred dollars, no less one hundred and forty-nine thousand.

When the trio had exhausted themselves presenting their claims to newspaper reporters, photographers and neighbors who had flocked to the humble Dougherty home to see how the little family was taking the news of their amazing good luck, they turned to Harry P. Marks, who had originally sold to Eddie the sweepstake ticket.

Mr. Marks almost caused a panic by announcing that no money would be paid anyone until the Doughertys decided among themselves who was to get it. All day the argument raged, continuing far into the night.

Finally the weary trio retired to bed to catch their breath and dream rose-tinted dreams of yachts, racing cars, night clubs and magnificent homes in the country. Early the next morning they were at it again, but this time the discussion only lasted for something like nine or fourteen hours. Then came the decision.

When Dan Sr., heard that the wife who deserted him seven years intended to claim dower interest in his share, he readily dropped his demands and conceded the entire sum to the boys, who have made some arrangements to care for their father without giving him an actual share.

The rest will be divided, Eddie giving his brother a share because they are brothers and "have always gone halves on everything." The boys propose to take a vacation trip, although vetoing their father's suggestion to go to Ireland as being too expensive. Then they'll return to their jobs and Eddie's employer will invest the cash for them.

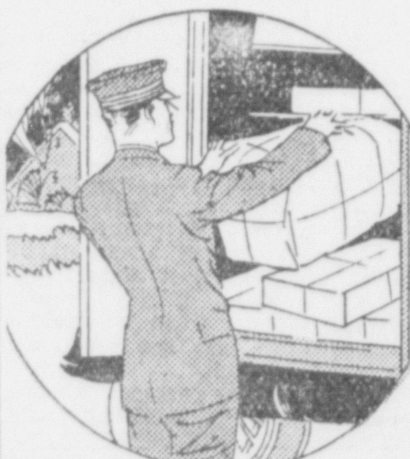

Despite their sudden wealth the Doughertys did not live expensively while on their trip to Canada to collect the money, Eddie's thirty-cent cigars being the biggest extravagance.

today, in order that she might guide her son's education and up-bringing personally. Immediately after his proclamation as king, Carol took Michael from his mother's arms, installed him in the royal nursery of Cotroceni Palace and expressed his intention of keeping the 9-year-old boy in his care.

Princess Helen's decision followed a second meeting with Carol last night, after he had been proclaimed king. The meeting lasted half an hour, and although just what transpired was not revealed, it was understood Carol made a dramatic plea for reconciliation.

King Carol took Michael this morning on a pilgrimage to the grave of King Ferdinand. He took various steps to install his son as the heir to the throne, and it is understood he will retain Michael at all costs. Under Roumanian common law, the father remains guardian of his children in the case of divorce, and while Princess Helen may have a strong moral argument for the custody of Michael, it is unlikely she will be successful in wresting him from the king.

Carol's first official act today was to appoint his brother, Prince Nicholas, a division general of the army and vice-admiral of the navy. Seven generals, including former War Minister Andulescu, were dismissed.

LONDON, June 9.—The amalgamation of Hungary and Roumania under King Carol II within a very short time was foreseen here today by Barbu Jonecu, powerful friend of the new monarch and wealthy

Roumanian business man who has a residence in London. "In two or three months, I shouldn't be surprised to hear of definite movements aimed at the amalgamation of Hungary and Roumania under Carol," Jonecu said. "Such a fusion would be quite possible because both countries require a stable government and amalgamation under a single crown would serve a useful and practical purpose."

had been destroyed, it was charged. Because of his collections on allegedly false bills, the report claimed that Gaskill owed the county road, or pike, repair fund, $23,920; the bridge fund, $5,428, and the ditch fund $183.

In connection with pike repair work, the report held that Gaskill and Isadore Kaufman, president of the Wilmington Crushed Limestone Company, jointly owed $5,067; that Gaskill and E. J. Stackhouse, secretary of this company, jointly owed $2,000; that Gaskill and Kaufman, on another count, jointly owed $2,411; that Gaskill and Dennis Stephens, Clayton Terrell and Frank Richardson, as county commissioners, jointly owed $36,180 on "illegal contracts," and that Gaskill and these three commissioners also jointly owe $6,750 because of "unlawful sale of lots."

Gaskill was alleged to owe $10,548 because of illegal refunds of taxes, penalties and special assessments. He was held jointly with Stephens, Richardson and Terrell for the return of $7,167 in connection with pike repairs.

Alleging illegal payments in connection with the delivery and hauling of stone for road repair work, the report claimed that Harry Moon owed $12,310 and that J. W. and L. J. Frazier owed $13,225 and that Moon also, owed $4,906 as "interest in contracts."

Recent Bride Presented At Charming Tea

An attractive and beautifully appointed affair was the tea given by Mrs. H. L. Sayre and her daughter, Miss Helen Sayre, at their home on N. King St., Saturday afternoon honoring Mrs. Richard Sayre of Cincinnati.

The home was handsomely decorated for the occasion with pink roses and blue delphinium predominating. Large baskets of roses and greenery were used throughout the rooms. The large table in

Custis - Harris Nuptials Celebrated Saturday

A charming wedding of the early summer season was that of Miss Eula Custis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Custis, St. Louis, Mo., and Mr. James McCullough Harris, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Harris of Clifton, which was solemnized Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, before an assemblage of about sixty relatives and close friends.

The living room of the Custis home was handsomely decorated for the occasion with greenery predominating. An altar in the room was banked with palms and fernery with summer flowers used profusely. Tall white candelabra stood at either side of the altar.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Theda Downing played a twenty-minute program of nuptial music. At the appointed hour the "Lohengrin Wedding March" announced

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OUR RICHES—For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.—2 Cor. 8:9.

HOLDING BACK

Senator Hiram Johnson's charge that the state department has withheld from the senate foreign relations committee important documents bearing on the London naval conference probably has more powder than shot to it. Obviously the committee should be placed in possession of all material pertinent to the international commitments with respect to which it is asked to render judgment. Otherwise the senate cannot intelligently perform its constitutional duty of advising the chief executive for or against ratification. At the same time, a broad line divides pertinence and impertinence in such matters.

As early as the first session of congress, a faction in the senate got the idea that "the Court," as it called the administration, was strained and contemptuous analogy to the court of George III, was bent on betraying the country by withholding executive correspondence from the senate. This faction harassed the secretary of the treasury, Alexander Hamilton, without mercy. On one occasion, when a treaty with the Cherokees was before the senate, Senator William Maclay rose and, with Washington sitting in the chamber, stated his vigorous objection that "we should have these advices and consents ravished from us." The senate hasn't learned much in 140 years. Although Mr. Hoover has discovered a desire for early action on the London treaty, we doubt if he or his secretary of state has any desire to ravish Senator Johnson and his colleagues.

As a matter of fact the treaty speaks for itself. The administration, it must be pointed out, cannot commit the United States beyond the letter of that document; and it can commit it to the letter of the treaty only by the advice and consent of the senate. Senator Johnson is unduly alarmed. The omission of certain scraps of paper from the correspondence sent over from the state department may have been due to lack of clarity in the committee's request for the documents. Common courtesy demanded that Secretary Stimson be given a chance to rectify the omission before he was branded before the country as deliberately withholding from the foreign relations committee material necessary to its proper understanding of the matter. The gentleman from California seems again to be engaged in weaving mare's-nests.

TARDIEU'S ANSWER

Although ostensibly facing in another direction, Premier Tardieu was unquestionably looking out of the corner of his eye at Italy when he announced in his Sunday speech that "France is in a position which frees her from the need for fear or to boast." The remark has all the stigmata of a "dirty dig" in response to some of Mussolini's recent perverted oratory. If it doesn't convey to that personage a taunt to the purport that Italy is scared and has been boasting through the mouth of her dictator in order to keep up her courage as she looks at her chief Mediterranean rival, then Il Duce is not as shrewd in the art of deduction as he is cracked up to be.

In a way the remark of Tardieu can be interpreted as an invitation to Mussolini to quit sticking out his tongue and come on and try conclusions if he doesn't like the way things are being done by France. And while the French premier may be bluffing, and Mussolini may know that he is bluffing and Tardieu may be quite aware that Mussolini knows he is bluffing, still there is a sting in the tail of the Frenchman's remarks which tends to make them anything but love producing. Because it is quite true that the greater part of the current Italian belligerency is bluster, and is not intended to be anything more than a theatrical gesture.

Indeed, the whole of the long distance ragging between the French and Italian capitals would be quite funny except for one or two things. There is the possibility that somebody may inadvertently and unintentionally step over the chalk line and precipitate an actual imbroglio neither side really wants to see commence, in which case the results would be extremely vexatious for the whole world; and it likewise is true that the squabbling over the backs of the Alps is a distinct hindrance to the general cause of peace and good understanding, and is an obstacle in the way of armament limitation and reduction. Two bad kids are disturbing the entire terrestrial neighborhood.

Now since Laura Ingalls has looped the loop in a plane nine hundred and eighty successive times, will somebody kindly explain what practical purpose her exhibition served?

Some of the members of the senate are not going to be especially keen for the special session; and maybe it will be short and snappy.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

TODAY'S BOYS

Stagg, grand old man among football coaches, says: "It is my firm belief that the boys of today are better than ever. They are ambitious, determined to succeed, keen in mind, rugged of body, and wholesome of character."

"The softness and flabbiness which prosperity and ease are so likely to develop haven't made any inroads on our American youth."

A COMMON HOBBY

You may grow into a hobby or just adopt one. Or you may grow a new hobby from the ground up. If you think you need a change from routine, a hobby may be the way out. This isn't good advice for young men. It's for middle age or age. But before you pick your hobby, think about the rest of the family. How will it strike the folks? And wouldn't it be a great thing if you and your son could have the same hobby? What possibilities of companionship lie there!

CONVERTED

Not long ago a tablet was placed to mark the spot where the great preacher and evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, was "converted." Don't hear much about people being converted these days. Nothing wrong about conversion. It's just an old-fashioned method of getting started in the right direction. Some think their way to a new start, deliberately, thoughtfully. Others are shot into a new road by an emotional explosion.

NOT A CROWDED FIELD

Parents whose boys have what we call a "mechanical turn of mind" ought to be happy. Scientists will tell them that the field of research and invention is not over-crowded. In some of the great developments of science in the past few years—aviation, radio, talkies—practical men have but scratched the surface of the immeasurable possibilities. Here is a fascinating future for the boy with the "mechanical turn."

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

What is the object of the National Guard?

The National Guard is trained to provide, in time of peace, an adequate, organized and effective force, sufficiently trained and developed so that it will be available in minor emergencies for employment within the limits of the United States by the states or by the United States, and so that it will be immediately available in major emergencies for employment in the execution of limited missions.

Number of Physicians

How many physicians are there in the United States?

The American Medical Journal estimates that in 1929 there were 149,521 physicians in the United States. That means there is an average of 12.85 doctors to each 10,000 population. The medical schools of the country report that the number of men and women receiving degrees as physicians is steadily increasing, the number of graduates in 1923 being 3,120 and in 1928, 4,262.

New U. S. Bills

On what date did the government begin to print the new bills?

The United States bureau of printing and engraving at Washington began printing the little notes on August 6, 1928, and up to June 30, 1929, the bureau had delivered 697,530,228 of the notes to the treasury and to the Federal Reserve banks. Deliveries are expected to total 1,020,600,000 small notes by June 30, 1930.

What is the aim of the American Red Cross?

The American Red Cross operates under its charter by act of congress of Jan. 5, 1905, "to furnish volunteer aid to the sick in time of war in accordance with the convention of Geneva; to assist in matters of voluntary relief and in accord with the military and naval authorities as a medium of communication between the American people and their army and navy; to continue and carry on a system of national and international relief in time of peace and to apply the same in mitigating the suffering caused by pestilence, famine, fire, flood and other great national calamities and to devise and carry on measures for preventing the same."

NOTE: The following pamphlets may be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope for each, to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C.: "Who's Who in Hollywood," "Swimming," "Seeing Washington," and Charles P. Stewart's treatise on "Our Government."

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK—Training dogs to lead blind and maimed men about the city is an established business here. There is one animal accompanying a legless cripple who pushes himself along on a low platform with the dog making a passage through the crowds. Another stands in front of the Hippodrome with a fox terrier sitting on its haunches the biggest part of the day. The income of these blind beggars is large, but the dogs are seldom owned by them. So well trained are the canines that they will lead any blind man or cripple through the thickest traffic with seldom an accident.

The dogs were first introduced here from Germany, where they are now improving on the scheme by attaching lights to the animals so they can be used at night.

HORSE FEVER

New York has gone racing mad. If it had the craze in past seasons, it has developed into a fever this Summer. Every corner group on Broadway, not discussing prohibition or itself, is talking about the horses. In every other cigar store the proprietor runs a pool room in his hat where hundreds of $2 bets are made daily.

Suburban Crows saw one of the largest crowds of its existence at Belmont Park. Besides excellent racing, there was a fashion parade of models from Fifth Avenue establishments. The grand stand and the space in front of it was crowded with the herd, the Field and Turf Club enclosure, and the paddock saw society at its best and the course that Lord Derby two weeks ago called "the most beautiful in the world" had all the coloring of a Continental resort.

It is quite probable that when Gallant Fox, winner of the Preakness and Kentucky Derby, meets Whirlone, the unbeaten Whitney three-year-old, a record crowd for American racing will be established.

Adler's Book Shop in East Fifty-second street is sending out catalogues and listed I notice "Scared and Profane Love." The typesetter who transposed "scared" into "scared" built better than he knew.

THE BAD ACTOR!

CRITICS OF NAVAL TREATY DECLARE UNCLE SAM CHANGES HIS WEAPONS TO HIS DISADVANTAGE UNDER PACT

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—A huge navy may be a national liability; not an asset. Some folk say so—that "preparedness" is on a par with packing a gun—far likelier to get the average man shot than he would be unarmed.

Still, the individual who does invest in a piece of artillery is no more than sensible, however unchristian, if he chooses the weapon with a view to the use he thinks he may need to put it to. On the theory that his calling as a moonshiner requires him occasionally to pick off a prohibition agent from across a mile-wide valley, he is not a bit influenced by the fact that some other chap, whose trade is highway robbery, finds a short-barreled revolver, with a six-foot effective range, his most convenient armament.

Conversely the stickup artist knows better than to try to lug a high-powered rifle around with him; it would be extremely unhandy.

The farther the testimony goes, at the senate foreign relations committee's investigation of the naval limitation agreement reached at the recent conference in London, the plainer it becomes that Uncle Sam was argued into accepting, for his own use, a type of cruisers that is admirably adapted to John Bull's purposes, but not at all to Uncle Sam's.

John Bull is lucky in having between twenty and thirty stations, scattered over nearly the whole face of the globe for his men-of-war to put into and freshen themselves up about as often as they please. Consequently he can do very well with quite small cruisers, because they never are called on to make long voyages. However, he prefers to have a great many of them—and the smaller they are the cheaper they are.

Except in his own home waters and the Caribbean, Uncle Sam is limited to only a couple of stations of any consequence; so his cruisers frequently must steam thousands of miles straightaway to reach the nearest shelter under their own flag—and it takes big vessels to do this, but a large number of them is not so essential.

In brief, Uncle Sam is best equipped with a high-powered, long-range rifle; John Bull with a short-barreled revolver.

Since they both insist on carrying firearms, it would seem as if the natural thing would be for each to provide himself with what he wants and let it go at that—but no; what John Bull has, Uncle Sam must have, what Uncle Sam has, John Bull is unhappy without.

After long wrangling at the London conference, Uncle Sam finally undertook to scrap his rifle and get along henceforth with a snub-nosed revolver.

Such is the bargain, if the senate approves it.

The Navy League of the United States, which may be a Tory organization, but nevertheless does specialize on problems of sea strength, puts it like this: "The treaty puts a temporary curb to the rapid upbuilding inaugurated by Britain and Japan in those categories of combatant vessels (mainly cruisers) not limited by the Washington treaty (negotiated in 1921-2) and gives the United States an opportunity to catch up partially; but that opportunity is secured at the price of a basic change in policy as to some of the types (meaning cruisers) we should build."

The league points to certain other American concessions likewise, but that is the vital one—Uncle Sam abandons his rifle for a sawed-off revolver.

Ever since naval negotiations began in the early 1920's, Uncle Sam's weakness unquestionably has been in his spokesmen's anxiety, in excess of the anxiety of the British and Japanese spokesmen, to agree on armament reduction.

Each time they have met it has been apparent that there would be no such agreement unless Uncle

Sam made the lion's share of the concessions—and each time, rather than report a failure, Uncle Samuel has made them.

This time, according to the Navy League, he did not even accomplish reduction.

The amounts involved "are of little moment in comparison with the totals," the league expresses it, "but attention is invited to them lest, starting with Secretary Stimson's incorrect basic figures, the attempt be made to further mislead by alleging that reduction has been accomplished by the London naval treaty, whereas it forecasts a slight increase."

Who's Who and Timely Views

GREATER ATTENTION TO REFORESTATION URGED

By HERBERT H. LEHMAN

Lieutenant Governor of New York (Herbert H. Lehman was born in New York City, March 28, 1878. He is a graduate of Williams college. He began in the employ of a textile manufacturing concern and became vice president in 1906. Since 1908 he has been an investment banker. He has been director of a dozen concerns and was elected lieutenant governor of New York state in 1928. A veteran of the World war, he reached the rank of colonel, and was awarded the distinguished service medal.)

Reforestation should be given greater attention. New York state is using timber 30 times as fast as the state is producing it.

As for the agricultural question, I agree with the recent statement of Henry Ford, that the situation cannot be cured alone through reduction in acreage or limitation in production, although the government can do much in promoting collective action in many directions.

There can be no one panacea. Development and improvement must necessarily be slow and steady, with intelligent and concerted efforts on the part of all phases of the people.

The production of raw materials, agriculture, manufacturing, commerce and banking are so closely interrelated that if any one of these major activities greatly lags behind the other the effect will be felt throughout the entire structure.

Agriculture, however, has lagged in New York and the nation and unquestionably the effect of this handicap has retarded the general economic development.

This being the case, it is obviously as much to the interest of industry and commerce as to the farmer himself to see to it that everything possible is done to bring agriculture on a level with the other factors. It is the duty of government, which is only the representative and servant of all the people of the state, to concern itself in bringing about improvement in conditions wherever possible and practicable.

The building of a secondary road system in the state is advocated as one of the necessary means of promoting the welfare of the farmer by affording him more adequate transportation facilities.

Reforestation is a new subject in this country, while Europe has been at it for centuries. In the principal European countries forestry has been highly developed and forest crops are as carefully tended as agricultural crops, whereas in the United States the forests have been treated as a mine rather than as a crop.

The United States is using timber four times as fast as it is being grown, and in addition the supplies of virgin timber are located mainly in the northwest which results in a tremendous freight bill.

The state, counties and towns should, and I am certain will, devote their attention to the problem of acquiring and planting and developing forests for their own and commercial use. The cost of reforestation is only a temporary expense; earnings and capital income are certain and will result in large income to the community.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Kidney and Beef Steak Pie
Baked Potatoes Beet Greens
Lettuce and Watercress
With French dressing
Rice Pudding
Tea

I have outlined for you a very economical and very English meal. The lettuce and watercress may be eaten simply with salt instead of with salad dressing, which would make it still more English. In that event, wash them thoroughly and place on one large dish. Provide individual salters for each person.

Today's Recipes

Kidney and Beef Steak Pie—One beef kidney, one pound of round steak. Wash and cut both into nice sized pieces for serving. Put each into separate vessels, cover with water and simmer until tender. Take out, and put in deep pie or baking dish, season well, thicken gravy from both with flour—no too thick—season well, pour over meat, and cover with a good crust. Onions may be added for flavor.

Rice Pudding—Put a quarter of a cup of washed rice into a quart of milk in baking dish, with a pinch of salt, a quarter cup of sugar and a cup of raisins, and let it bake slowly for two hours, or until the milk is evaporated. Occasionally stir under the crust that forms on top.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

"Dear Doctor: I have a gold, and a sterling necklace which turn my neck black when I wear them. I have been told that it is the sulphuric acid in my system which causes this. Could I change my diet to correct this condition? I have tried having my friends wear them for a day at a time, but they do not affect their skins as they do mine. MISS F."

This blackening from jewelry is not an uncommon occurrence, Miss F. Most all of us have had it happen at certain times.

There is a certain amount of sulphur in the perspiration, and it is the combination of this sulphur with the alloy in the gold and the silver in ornaments that results in the marking, for a salt of sulphur that is black is produced.

The nose piece of eyeglasses frequently have to be lined with cork or some fabric to prevent this staining.

The epidermal scales (the top layers that are always renewing themselves and casting the old cells off) are composed of a substance called keratin, which is rich in sulphur, and in reality it is these scales that compose the sulphur of the perspiration. This is one means by which sulphur is removed from the body. It is also removed by the kidneys.

Sulphur is a constituent of the protein elements in foods and is a necessary element in the building and repair of the cells and the body chemistry in general. Most natural foods have a certain amount of protein (therefore sulphur), but they are known as "protein" foods only when the proportion of protein is high in them. All flesh foods—meats, fish, fowl, eggs—are the highest protein foods.

I don't know whether your diet has anything to do with your annoyance or not, but if it is too high in protein it may be possible that you have an excess of sulphur which would have to be excreted by the skin and kidneys.

(Wheat is also high in sulphur, and if you are an excessive bread and pastry eater, that may also be a factor.)

Whether the sulphuring process for dried fruits is of any harm or not has not been fully settled. This treatment prevents their darkening and fermentation during the time they are air-dried, and it also is said to keep the fruit free from insects. Sherman states that the Department of Agriculture institutes no prosecution in the case of the application of the fumes of burning sulphur (sulphur dioxide), if the total amount of sulphur doesn't exceed a certain limit, but the label of each package of sulphured fruit has to bear the statement that the food is preserved by sulphur dioxide.

(Sulphuric acid is formed in small amounts in the body, but it is neutralized by the alkalies. If you had too much of it, you would not live.)

For those who are interested, we have an article on the Balanced Diet, which can be obtained by following column rules.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column in their turn. Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus the following small charge to help cover cost of printing and handling: for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet, ten cents in coin. Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

So many unhappily married people seem to think that if they divorce their present mate and marry someone else with whom they are in love, their happiness would be assured.

Now, as a matter of fact, before marrying at all this person was presumably convinced that marriage with the present husband or wife was the one thing needed to make them supremely happy, and no advice was welcomed that discouraged the idea and intimated that there might be breakers ahead.

The fact of the matter is, that the very same factors that wrecked one marriage would be likely to do the same to the second. The person who is constitutionally a philanderer, will philander after the novelty of a second marriage has worn off, just as he did after the first. A nagger will scold on when intimacy has bred contempt with the second mate as with the first. The fault of a ruined romance is seldom all on one head.

The best assurance of happiness with anyone is to play the game fairly and squarely, to try to meet life's trying moments with courtesy and good temper.

PERPLEZED: I think you are eminently wise and just, my dear. A few months' freedom from the "ties of marriage" may demonstrate to your husband that their advantages very much offset their binding qualities.

It may be that at the conclusion of the summer, if you can carry out this plan of yours of getting employment, he will find that he cannot be happy without you. He probably loves you more than he realizes. Later, he may still find that he yearns occasionally for the freedom of bachelorhood. If this proves so, the view of the fact that you love him dearly, could you compromise and work out a philosophy of life in which you would not be too much hurt if he occasionally digressed from the accepted path? In other words, can you accept him as he is, fault and all? That, I imagine, is going to be your real problem, and if you can't, it may be you who desires the permanent separation after all.

J. I wish I had your parents' version of the story. I would like to know why they think it necessary to send an escort for you when you come home from work. Have there been some attacks on girls in your neighborhood that they fear for your safety? Or have you deceived them in the past and they cannot trust you? It is pretty hard to give you advice when I don't know the other side.

All you can do is to be trustworthy, and maybe, before long, you will meet another boy with whom you can "go steady" and you'll have a good time again.

BLUE: Cheer up, dear, you are not really the most unhappy girl in the world. On the contrary, you have much to be happy about. Love should not make you miserable.

Why not let it make you happy? Real love does not care so much about itself and possession of the loved one. It is happy to love and to try to make itself worthy of the one loved.

I think you made a mistake in calling the boy friend. His reception of your call would indicate that, but you need not worry about that. He probably thinks of you as a little girl a good deal younger. Now, dear, brace up. Be glad you're alive and in love, and keep hoping that your happy face will attract him. If I don't tell you you won't believe me if I tell you that you can be happy again, anyway, but it's true.

How To Achieve Beauty

By GLAYS GLAD

FIRST START FEW MOTIONS IN EXERCISE

Women often neglect important things because they expend too much time worrying about trivialities.

I am thinking particularly of those girls who, after they had practiced a few exercises for shaping the legs, became perturbed at the resulting stiffness of the muscles.

Naturally, if you begin to use muscles that have not been exercised at all, or if you begin to thoroughly exercise muscles that have had very little activity, the result will be a bit of soreness. That is no cause for worry—it's a natural result!

If you were taking a course of stage dancing from an efficient instructor, and objected to doing the following day's exercises because your muscles were sore from the first day's efforts, you wouldn't get much of a respite from the routine he had set for you.

If you were learning to ride horseback, and you had aching muscles from the first try-out, you'd be expected to continue the lessons just the same the next day, and the next, and the next. And finally you'd find that the soreness was all gone, and had been only a temporary result. It's something to be expected.

The girl who gives up her leg exercises because her muscles become a bit sore, doesn't stand much chance of thinning or developing her legs—whatever result she is striving for.

Other exercises for back, chest, neck, etc., may be done in stretching movements that are just as effective as the quick, violent exercise, and yet less tiring.

And, of course, no sensible person begins exercising by repeating 50 times every exercise given. The wisest course to pursue in exercising is to begin by doing the prescribed motions five to ten times, and then gradually increasing the number as the muscles become more and more flexible.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS FRAMED by Phil

Once regarded as rather a joke ball player because of his natural awkwardness and the clumsy way he played the outfield, Babe Herman of the league-leading Brooklyn club has undergone a complete transformation and is now vastly improved.

He is just about the best hitter in the National League and just at present is setting the pace for batters in this league with a percentage of .430, having made seventy-four hits in 176 times at bat. Not only that but he also leads the league in runs scored with fifty, and has made the most safe hits.

The American League may have its Babe Ruth but the National also has its Babe who is the home run king of an assault and battery team that is leading the race.

Herman was for a time something of a joke but even if he were twice as comical as he is, and he is pretty funny when he starts stealing bases which are already occupied and running in circles under high flies, the pitchers of the National League wouldn't appreciate him.

Herman, however, certainly can bust them out to the wide open spaces. He is probably not yet properly appreciated by the fans but the day is not far distant when he will be. The fans have grown so accustomed to laughing at and with Babe, that they don't recognize his true worth to Uncle Robbie's team. But he is improving steadily in every department of play and if Brooklyn should win the pennant, which it may, it will be the case of another goat of the game transformed into a hero almost overnight.

Meanwhile Babe, who is one of the few under-rated and under-publicized ball players in captivity, will go on "busting them" and winning ball games for the Dodgers by his slugging.

During the recent Cincinnati-New York series, Hughie Critz, traded by the Reds to the Giants a few weeks ago, smacked out two home runs. That, on the face of it, is not unusual. Many ball players hit that many and more homers in a single game, let alone a whole season. But in Critz's case it was unique because all last year Hughie smote only one four-bagger.

This peculiar young man, called the best defensive second baseman in the major leagues, came to the Reds in 1924 but because of the perennial inability of the Reds to get somewhere in the league standings, his remarkable fielding talent was enshrined. It was just a case of a great defensive second sacker in the wrong environment.

Naturally a weak batter, Critz's classy fielding never diminished. Explaining his uncanny knack of almost always being where the ball is hit between first and second.

Hughie said recently: "You've got to be clever and always act intelligently in this game. Years ago when I started in the Cotton States League, I hit upon the idea that I'd have to actually sense an approaching play and in this manner get in the path of the ball without waiting for the actual hit. In time I had this worked down to a science.

"This doesn't mean for an infielder to run wherever he cares to. You have to think and act accordingly."

Hughie is 29 years old and is five feet, seven inches in height. He scales 150 pounds and has an admirable physique. He has a better-than-average arm and is one of the best liked players in the circuit.

By the way, did you ever notice Hughie's habit of kicking away the glove of the other side's second baseman before settling down at his post? He does it every inning and it is a habit just like his extraordinary fielding ability.

AMERICAN LEGION JUNIORS DEFEATED BY URBANA SUNDAY

Urbana's junior American Legion baseball team turned the tables on the Xenia Poody Post, American Legion juniors and walked off the field with a 11 to 7 victory in a return game played on the KilKare Park diamond, Dayton Pike, Sunday afternoon.

The local juniors had vanquished the Urbana nine rather easily several weeks ago at Urbana but the visitors, through the medium of late inning rallies, managed to reverse the decision this time.

The Xenia nine enjoyed a 5 to 1 lead at the end of the fourth inning and then the fireworks started. Urbana scored four runs in the fifth to even the score and then chased six runs across the plate in the sixth. The local team came back to score twice in the sixth but the big margin could not be overcome.

Tranaman, Urbana pitcher, struck out thirteen batsmen in the seven-inning contest. Batson started on the mound for the local juniors and was succeeded by Chambliss.

The Xenia juniors lined up with Stiles at third base; Cramer at shortstop; Anderson in right field; Compton at first base; Thompson in center field; Glenn behind the plate; Short in left field; Huston at second base and Batson and Chambliss pitching. M. Hyman and Smith also broke into the game.

The Xenia juniors have a record of two victories and two defeats to show for four games played to date.

SPRINGFIELD TEAM BUNCHES FOUR HITS FOR ONLY SCORING

Early Runs Enable Locals To Defeat Crowell Team

Behind the crafty pitching of Ankeney, who was virtually invincible in the pinches, the Xenia Merchants returned to winning form and defeated the Crowell Publishing Co. semi-pro nine of Springfield, 4 to 3 for their fourth victory of the season Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Ankeney was nipped for twelve hits and was hit safely in every inning but the fourth and ninth but had only one hit round, the eighth, when the Springfield team clustered four hits, one a triple, for three runs.

Meanwhile, the Merchants, hitting safely in every inning, had scored two runs in the first inning and two more in the third, a sufficient number to win as it afterward proved.

Brakefield, the Springfield hurler, was also hit freely, releasing fourteen hits, but was exceptionally stingy with hits with runners on base as indicated by the fact the local nine had no fewer than twelve runners stranded by the wayside on the paths. Springfield, for that matter, had nine men left on bases.

Merchants got away to a two-run lead in the first stanza. Johnson walked and Fuller singled, advancing the runner to third. Fuller stole second and both runners crossed the plate on a single by Ruse.

The local team managed to fill the bases in the second as a result of a walk, hit batter and a single but could not score. In the third a home run by Durnbaugh with the bases empty, a double by Moore and singles by Cyphers and Weller gave the Merchants their final two runs. After this inning Brakefield settled down and blanked the Merchants for the remaining five innings.

Ankeney, after keeping the Crowell team away from the plate for seven innings, was the victim of a three-run rally in the eighth. With one down, Baughman Brakefield and Landfried singled in succession, the former scoring. E. Laub grounded to Cyphers whose throw nipped Brakefield at the plate, but Badgley tripled, scoring Landfried and F. Laub. With the tying run on third, James popped to Fuller for the third out. Safely past this crisis, Ankeney got the first three batters in order in the ninth.

Every member of the Merchants team hit safely except Cain. Johnson, Fuller, Durnbaugh, Moore, Cyphers, and Ankeney each got two bingles. Baughman, center fielder, obtained three hits for the visitors.

Merchants accorded Ankeney excellent support in the field as a hobbler by Ruse was the only mis-cue of the local nine. Springfield was guilty of four misplays but none of the errors proved costly as they did not figure in the scoring.

BABY CONTEST TOO TOUGH FOR OTEY; PREFER S FIGHT INSTEAD

By MARSHAL OTEY WALKER
Fight Correspondent for Central Press and The Gazette

BOUND FOR THE BATTLE FIELD June 9.—Well, Sir Mr. Editor and readers, here I am on my way to see a fight in order to escape being mixed up in another one.

If that doesn't make sense, Mr. Reader, don't get mad and cancel your subscription yet, but read on and I'll explain.

You know Aunt Sarah Peabody? Nice woman, none better, but always starting some kind of business to pep up the Old Home Town. And the ideas that woman can get hold of! Whoo-ee.

Well, her latest one is to have a baby beauty contest in the Old Home Town. And because I wear the only badge in our community she appoints me judge.

Mister, as marshal of our thriving little town, my business is to keep people out of trouble and not get myself into it. So that's why I'm on my "vacation" and putting as many good, old United States miles between myself and that baby contest that I can.

Why, up to this morning when I sneaked out of town and caught the 2:35 for points due east there

Twilight Golf Tournaments To Be Inaugurated Wednesday

A weekly series of Wednesday afternoon "twilight mixed golf tournaments" will be inaugurated at the Xenia Country Club this week.

The tournaments, beginning late each Wednesday afternoon, will be followed by a form of picnic dinner at the clubhouse with members bringing their own lunches.

Mrs. S. M. McKay will have general charge of the weekly events and will appoint different committees each week. Mrs. E. H. Heathman is the committee chairman this week and requests club members to make their reservations with her not later than Tuesday evening.

Jamestown Independents Hit Timely To Defeat Centerville

Timely hitting enabled the Jamestown Independents to defeat Centerville by a score of 6 to 3 Sunday afternoon at Leach Park, Jamestown.

Jamestown was away to a two-run lead in the first inning when Gallagher was safe on an error and Trout and Pickering followed with doubles, but Centerville tied up matters in the third. Each team tallied a run in the fifth and the count remained even. In the sixth Jamestown produced a winning three-run rally. In this stanza Evans singled, Moorman was hit by a pitched ball, Gallagher drew a base on balls and Toland and Tidd doubled.

Centerville made a strong bid in the ninth and managed to fill the bases but Evans, Jamestown pitcher, tightened down and retired the side without further scoring.

Evans fanned eight batters and did not walk a man. He granted nine hits, the same number the Independents mustered off to C. Burnett, Centerville twirler. Box score:

Jamestown	30	6	10	1
Gallagher, 2b	3	1	0	1
Toland, c	4	1	2	0

Shoots at Prowler

Clarence Springer, 124 Union, fired twice at a prowler late Sunday night but neither shot is believed to have taken effect, according to a report made to police.

Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, who investigated, learned that Springer fired two shots from a shot gun.

N. Y. Stock Market

NEW YORK, June 9.—The early trading in the stock market today was only a continuation of the selling movements which caught the whole market unawares on Friday and Saturday and forced prices of many of the active shares to the low levels of the year. The "big bears" who were credited with another successful market coup were ready to deluge the list with another selling wave, counting upon the wiping out of margins and weak kneed speculative selling to help the downward movement along.

While prices of the leaders dipped slightly under Saturday's final prices, a rally swept through the market before the end of the first hour which restored a good part of the lost ground. U. S. Steel carried down to 164 in the first period, recovered to above 165. General Electric, Radio Keith, Radio and other favorites held strongly around the level of Saturday's close, while leading oil, utility and steel stocks pushed through to fractional advances.

Commodity markets were unsettled, with cotton down fifteen points and silk 5 points lower. Call money was in supply at 3 per cent.

CHURCH OF CHRIST FORMED IN XENIA AT SUNDAY SERVICE

A splendid audience assembled Sunday morning at the Opera House to hear Evangelist J. S. Raum speak on "The Meaning and Message of Pentecost."

Mrs. Edna McClellan sang "The Holy City" at the first Sunday morning service thus far conducted. At the special meeting which followed the sermon the group present voted unanimously to organize a local Church of Christ and the following officers were selected.

Elders—J. F. Glass, B. H. Strong, and A. A. Saunders. Deacons—H. S. Tedric, James Lininger, L. D. Hatfield, R. H. Murray and Thos. P. Lauss.

A Sunday School will be organized next Sunday at 9:30 and regular morning services inaugurated. Evangelist Raum will speak Monday night at the Opera House at 8 p. m. on the subject "Why I Am A Christian." More than 200 people heard him speak Sunday night on the subject, "Our Home—Its Friends and Its Foes."

The new congregation thus far assembled represents nineteen families including ten men.

CHILDREN RECEIVE READING REWARDS

The county library has made it a practice for the last three years to award reading diplomas to children reading ten approved books during the current school year. A gold seal is given for every five books additional.

This year approximately 2,000 diplomas were given to children in county and city schools while more than 4,000 seals were placed on these diplomas, showing that the children read more books than ever before during the year 1929-30.

In two of the county schools, Beaver in Beaver Creek Twp. and Pleasant Valley in Silver Creek Twp., every child in the school won at least a diploma. Twenty-five gold seals were awarded Pleasant Valley, which has an enrollment of thirteen pupils, while twenty-six seals were given to pupils of Beaver School with its twenty pupils.

In the city schools some children had as many as eighteen and nineteen seals placed on their diplomas.

BRINGING UP FATHER

DAD'S GIRL EDNA ROBB WEBSTER THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

READ THIS FIRST: Clara Dee Forester is the pampered, motherless daughter of a millionaire, who is so disgusted with the wealthy young that he leaves his daughter one dollar at his death, hoping that some quality in her will make her a successful woman. She goes to Mrs. Flynn's boarding house to live, and there meets Winfield Baxter, a young chemist. After weeks of discouragement, she becomes a model for the famous artist, Ivan Moreau, who finally persuades her to accept his entertainment. Winfield also takes her out to much less expensive places.

Winfield fears he will lose out in his competition with the artist's attentions to Clara Dee. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XX

Winfield had ceased to criticize Clara Dee for Ivan's attentions to her, but he paced the floor of his room in restless indignation every time Moreau came for her. He had made considerable progress with his work, but that had now become second of interest and importance to him. For when a man falls desperately in love with the one woman in the world for him, she becomes of paramount importance in his life; nothing else can assume nor presume to the place of honor which she holds. And when she seems likely to be won from his very arms by an ardent rival, his interest is apt to center wholly upon her. Especially when his empty hands are tied with a deception and a faithful promise. Since Gregory had suggested this plan of campaign, he felt justified in asking his advice with this baffling predicament.

"You see, Uncle John, neither of us had anticipated such a rival as Ivan Moreau. I had only expected to compete with a few yokels— even no one, perhaps, for, of course, I knew that even though she had lost her social position, she would resent any attentions from the average man of her association. What am I to do? I loathe myself as much as she would if she learned the truth about me, when I propel her into any of the 'joins' I am supposed to frequent."

"I should think a rival would make the contest all the more interesting," his uncle's eyes twinkled.

"Not when the other fellow steadily gains the advantage and I more steadily lose out," rebelliously.

"Is that the situation?" "Could you suppose it would be otherwise, with the slim chances I have?"

"I suppose clean, young manhood has no chance against sordid, unscrupulous middle age."

"Not with the girls of today. They don't compare such unimportant qualifications as that. They only weigh the material advantages a man can offer them," morosely.

"You can't classify Clara Dee with all the modern girls. She is thoroughly enough modern, I grant, but she has more behind her than a great many of them. I'm sorry about her friendship with Moreau. But I trust you to win her in spite of his reputation for winning whatever he wants. I believe in Clara Dee too thoroughly, judging from her record since her father's death, to believe that she will accept Moreau and his standards, for the sake of irresponsibility."

"But can't you do something— make her quit working for him, persuade her that she must stop being seen with him?"

The older man shook his head. "No, that is not the provision of her father's will, that whatever she does, I must offer her no advice, nor influence her mind in any matter. Much as I love her myself, I have too great a respect for the wish of my best friend to fall his confidence in me. She is his daughter and he had some great purpose in placing her in this position. I'm sure."

"The whole thing is absurd in my opinion—if her father were living, do you think he would allow her to go on with this affair and not put out a hand to save her from the inevitable end?"

Gregory smiled sadly. "No doubt if he did he would only aggravate her into being more determined in her pursuits. Perhaps her father was right after all. She may have a better chance of saving herself now, than had he entrusted his millions to her. If you will not do the very thing you suggest, and use your influence in your own behalf, she will do the rest for herself, or I am a poor judge of human nature."

But he was more concerned over the situation than he would admit to his nephew, and Clara Dee occupied his thoughts for several days, until the young lady, herself, came into his office.

"Mighty glad to see you, Clara Dee. How is everything?"

"Fine, Mr. Gregory. I like working for Mr. Moreau more every day, and school is so very interesting that I wish I had more time to devote to it. No one except you and Mrs. Flynn know about my attending night school, yet."

"Just so Moreau doesn't find it out and persuade you that it is nonsense," he watched her furtively.

"How could he influence me in what I wish to do? I have a few convictions of my own," she declared independently.

"For instance, that hard work, economy and disappointments are more to be desired than ease, luxury and the gratification of every whim?"

"That depends upon the circumstances. In either case, independence would be of the most importance. Nothing would be of any importance or value if one were not free."

"What do you mean, 'free'?"

"Why—a clear conscience, knowing that whatever happiness one had, he had earned it honestly."

"How about depending upon a man for happiness?"

"That might be possible if one were in love. That would be quite honest, for marriage is honorable."

"You don't love Moreau?" suddenly.

"No. Oh! no. He isn't my idea of a man to love, honor and obey. I like him well enough for a friend—but—" she shrugged slightly.

There anyone else, Clara Dee?"

She flushed guiltily. "Why—no—that is—" she lowered her eyes and toyed with a button on her coat. "There is a young man at Mrs. Flynn's, a chemist, who rather interests me. It is possible—" she dimpled and smiled roguishly, "don't you tell a soul, Mr. Gregory."

He promised absolute secrecy, well satisfied that she would take care of herself, and feeling just a little guilty of having ventured into a forbidden shrine. But he maneuvered to get in touch with the other angle of the triangle.

"I have a new client," Ivan announced one morning to Clara Dee. "I'm doing a portrait of Mrs. John Gregory."

"Mrs. Gregory?" Clara Dee started.

"Yes, you know her?" he asked with apparent unconcern.

"No—the wife of a famous attorney, isn't she?" she prevaricated, trying to appear uninterested.

"Yes, and a beautiful old dame. The pearls she is wearing for the portrait are worthy of a queen. I'd like to get you some like them if you would accept them, Chickadee."

"What useless extravagance that would be. Van. What use have I for pearls?"

"Just to wear them that I might feast my eyes upon your adorned beauty."

"You are ludicrous. You talk as if I were the only beautiful person in the world!"

"Well, you are one of the most beautiful. Oh! Chickadee, let me make you happy."

"Why, I am quite happy. Van. As happy as one can expect to be, who hasn't lived long enough to have sufficient wisdom to know what happiness really is."

"You talk like an ancient philosopher."

HOUSE RANSACKED HERE OVER WEEK END

Thieves who invaded the residence of Clarence R. Jeffries, 714 N. West St., while the family was away from home over the week-end, ransacked the house and obtained loot valued at more than $185, according to a report made to police Sunday night.

The wholesale robbery occurred sometime between 5:30 a. m. Saturday and 8 p. m. Sunday while the dwelling was unoccupied. The intruders had entered the residence through a kitchen window after shattering a pane of glass.

The loot included a radio, table size, valued at $150, a man's black rubber raincoat worth $8; a gold hunting case watch valued at $15; three soft collar white shirts worth $6; a bill-fold worth $5; a glove and a fountain pen.

Funeral services for Theodore Haines, 40, former Xenian, who died suddenly Sunday morning at 10 o'clock at his home in Sharonville, will be held at the residence Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be made in Lockland.

Mr. Haines dropped dead suddenly due to heart trouble. He was a resident of this city for a number of years.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Marie Haines, and five daughters: Misses Polly Ann, Frances, Louise, Jane and Caroline all at home.

WOMAN ARRESTED

Arrested by Sheriff Ohmer Tate and his deputies Saturday night and released from custody late the same evening on bond, Mrs. Grace Fanning, Bellbrook Ave., is expected to be arraigned before Probate Judge S. C. Wright Monday on a charge of selling liquor. Authorities, armed with a search warrant, raided her home but found no liquor.

phers," he laughed at her grown-up seriousness. "Sometimes I think there are two of you. You are like two individuals who have grown up in opposite environments. I sometimes wonder which of you I like better."

She hesitated before replying. He had so accurately guessed her unusual situation. "Perhaps I am two," she dimpled. "I often feel that way, too, Van. But both of me are happy and contented."

"If, in any way, I can ever make you happier, you will let me know, dear?"

"Of course, but perhaps by that time you will be making someone else happy!" she retorted.

THREE WILL ATTEND SCOUT CAMP SCHOOL FROM XENIA TROOPS

Region four, Boy Scouts of America, will conduct a camp leader's training school at Camp Hook near Middletown, June 10 to 15 inclusive. This is one of the schools conducted by the national camping department with the co-operation of the education department and the regional staff of the Scout organization.

Enrollment is open to men who have, or expect to have, the responsibilities of leadership positions in Boy Scout activity. All students will participate in actual camping, campcraft demonstrations, camp fire programs, general lectures on boy nature, health and safety, camp objectives and round table discussions.

Three persons will represent the Tecumseh Council, of which Greene County is a part, at Camp Hook, this week. They are: Homer T. Gratz, scout field executive; Ernest L. Blackburn, local scoutmaster and director of Camp Mv. Y. Cooper for the summer; the Rev. Adrian G. Lebold, pastor of the First Lutheran Church, chairman of Troop 45 and director of Greene County scout publicity.

These men will leave for Middletown early Tuesday morning. The purpose of Camp Hook is to train camp directors, activities directors, and aquatic directors for Boy Scout camps. The courses provide for six days of actual concentrated training in camp with a regular schedule of projects, demonstrations and written assignments. Both practice, notebook work and assignments must be completed before a certificate will be issued. Attendance at this camp will earn training credits in the growth of the scout executive program.

Boy Scout leaders from Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia will be in attendance. At least four men will represent each council in region four of the national scout organization.

COLLECTION OF OLD FINES IS STARTED

Police have inaugurated an intensive campaign to collect old fines due Municipal Court from law violators who have been released from custody from time to time on their promise to pay assessments before specified dates but who have failed to keep their promises.

The drive formally began Monday when Lindsay Vance, W. Second St., was re-arrested by Patrolman Fred Jones and committed to the County Jail to work out a fine of $25 and costs imposed by Judge E. D. Smith last March 18 on an intoxication charge.

THEODORE HAINES CLAIMED BY DEATH

Funeral services for Theodore Haines, 40, former Xenian, who died suddenly Sunday morning at 10 o'clock at his home in Sharonville, will be held at the residence Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be made in Lockland.

Mr. Haines dropped dead suddenly due to heart trouble. He was a resident of this city for a number of years.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Marie Haines, and five daughters: Misses Polly Ann, Frances, Louise, Jane and Caroline all at home.

COUNTY LIBRARY BUILDS NEW STACKS

The county library has just completed the erection of a second level of book stacks in the stack room and the rearrangement of books in the library. Older numbers of magazines and less popular books of non-fiction have been shelved on the upper tier of stacks leaving the fiction, literature, travel, biography and history on the first floor.

The additional shelves will provide storage room for approximately 5,000 more books, it is said. All those interested are invited to visit the library and see the changes that have been made.

DEATH RATE FROM TUBERCULOSIS HIGH

COLUMBUS, O., June 9—"Although there was a decline in tuberculosis during the past year, the death rate is still too high and we must not relax in our efforts to eradicate this terrible disease," declared Dr. C. A. Neal, state health director.

"As compared with the preceding year, there were 440 deaths in Ohio per 100,000 population from tuberculosis during 1929."

Neal stated that tuberculosis ranks seventh among the causes of death in the Buckeye state. "In 1929, there were 8,057 cases of tuberculosis in Ohio. That is a rate of 119.7 per 100,000 population. There were 4,536 deaths."

The Theater

The life of a movie actor isn't what it was fifteen years ago, says Cyrille Maude, English stage celebrity, contrasting his experiences making "Peer Gynt" in 1915 with his present role in "Grumpy."

"One fortnight of that early picture remains especially vivid in my memory," he says. "I would not have missed it for anything, but I am glad, nevertheless, that I don't have to repeat it. I prefer the film methods of today."

"The studios of 1915 were lit by sunlight, coming through the glass roofs, and they were like the outdoors. But only a small part of our picture was made in the studio. I recall mad dashes up mountains, the producers that stars were entirely too valuable for such risks and no doubles were employed. But how their eyes would have popped out then if they had been told that a picture made fifteen years later would cost four million dollars.

Occasionally, however, there is a return to the primitive in film methods. On location the other day Sue Carol had to use for a dressing room the privacy of a blanket held up by an electrician. When nearly everyone on location engaged in a fight to see which would hold up the screen for Miss Carol's changes, the arrangement was done away with.

to the desert and to the sea. I fought Indians, jumped into the ocean, rolled into a stream, participated in duels and flirted indiscriminately. From early morning until the sun sank behind the hills in the evening I was on the go every minute, and I never knew just what delightful adventure I would have next.

"Most vividly in my memory stands out the trip to Catalina Island. I was up at 4 o'clock in the morning. At 5:30 the company assembled at the electric trolley station and we were bundled aboard and whisked away to the coast. A small craft took us to the island, and a more miserable voyage I never experienced. We anchored offshore near the island where several scenes were made. My dressing room was a screened-off portion of the deck.

"As the culmination of one scene, I had to jump from the high bows of the vessel into the sea, to escape from the police. By the time I had done that over and over, I was so tired I would have jumped anything. But the worst was to come. My next immersion in the sea occurred when a log was put into the water and I had to cling to it while the waves broke over me. I was over well done up when it was over. However, even this was nothing compared to the next day's work.

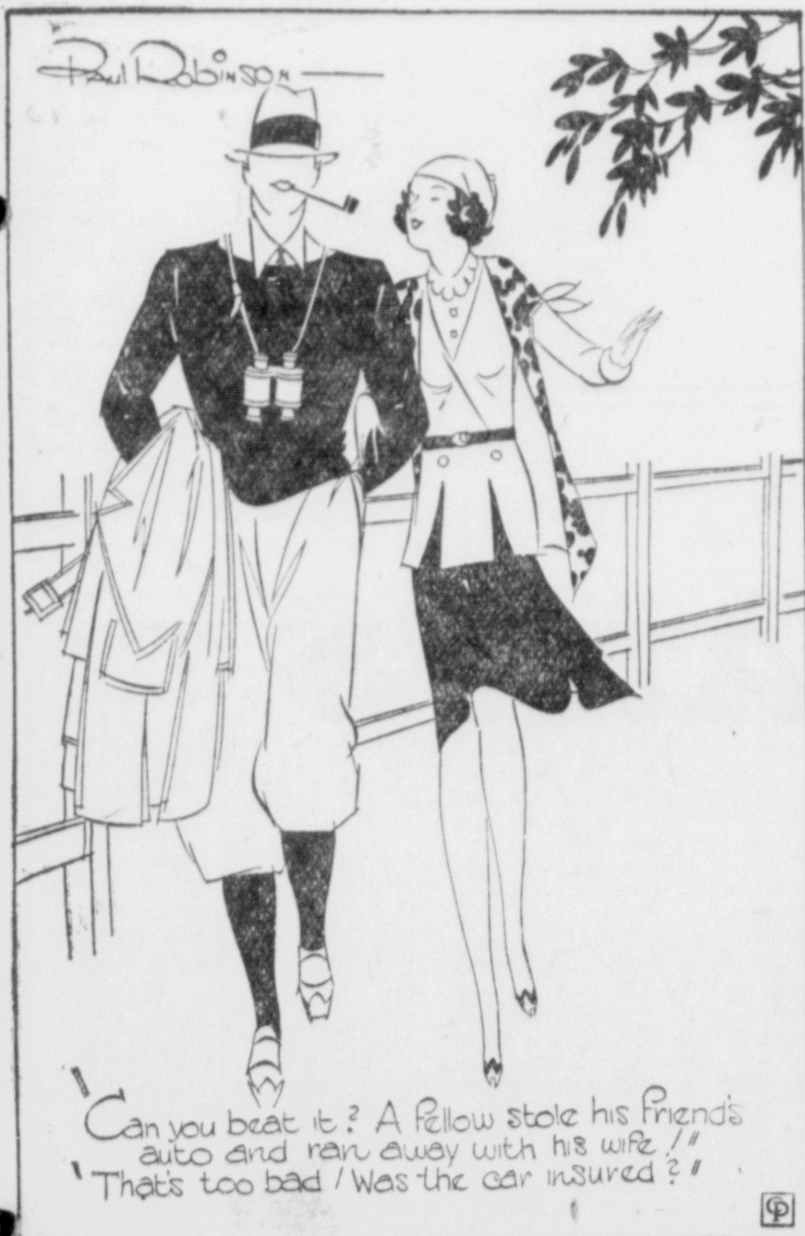

"The next morning we went to a lake in the mountains. I was told to get into an Indian canoe and to paddle across the stream, and a man would shoot at me and splinter the paddle in my hand with a rifle shot. I objected most strongly to this. But Oscar Apfel, the director, told me that the man who was to do the shooting was the best marksman in California. On that assurance I went ahead. The first shots splintered around me in the water. Then I felt a quick tug at my wrists. The paddle was splintered."

A Message To The Women

EVERY WOMAN is vitally interested in the welfare of her husband's business. Perhaps she has no husband. She may be dependent upon her father, her brother or her son. Yet, the interest is the same. It is an interest in the betterment of local conditions; the improvement of home life; the enlargement of her income or her household budget. Women like pretty things but their availability is in direct proportion to the prosperity of the household.

XENIA MOTHERS ARE VITALLY INTERESTED in the outlook for their sons and daughters. It is an old, old story, this rearing of a family. It goes back to prehistoric times when the survival of the fittest was the rule of mankind. The same principle has lived down through the ages. Law begins in the home. A community will prosper only as its children grow up and prosper. Children are the oncoming citizens of the community, and every mother is training her offspring for citizenship.

EVERY WIFE IN XENIA IS VITALLY interested in her husband's position and financial standing. For his position is the identical position of the family and of the children. Any impairment of her husband's credit reflects upon the wife and upon the family. Earning power of the head of the household is directly dependent upon the prosperity of the local Community. For local depression means restriction of local earning power. Xenia's women should give very careful consideration to their purchases.

IN TWO THIRDS OF THE FAMILIES IN AMERICA the housewife is the purchasing agent of the family. Hers is the task of maintaining the household within the weekly budget. It is up to her to buy for the family as economically and judiciously as possible. Mothers, therefore have two obligations to perform in this position of purchasing agent. First of all, they must observe the necessary thrift to keep the family expenditures at a minimum. And then there is that greater obligation to their sons and daughters. They must realize that the opportunities will be limited if Xenia stands still, which it will if outside corporations are shown preference while Home Owned stores are denied support. Self-preservation is the first law of nature, and it applies equally well in the family and in the community.

THE WOMEN OF XENIA CAN, therefore, contribute generously to their own cause and that of their husband and children and family, if they will support their Home Town merchants. A dollar spent with Chain Stores means a dollar taken out of Xenia, and it is here in this community where our women are rearing their families. A dollar taken out of Xenia means a dollar added to the prosperity of some other city and a dollar deducted from the financial assets of our community.

XENIA'S WOMEN ARE INTERESTED IN SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES, for it is in these two institutions that the children receive the foundation of character. The taxes that go to pay for the maintenance of the schools and the contributions that provide for the upkeep of churches come from Xenia's Community Builders, not from the Chain Stores. Not one fraction of a cent spent with Chain Stores returns to Xenia as a contribution to the schools and churches. Xenia's women should, therefore, give their co-operation in the movement to add to our city's assets. Xenia should receive first consideration in the minds of its women. Patronize your Independent Merchant for he is of Xenia and for Xenia.
